Sermon Scripture:

Ecclesiastes 3:1-15

Sermon Thought:

We are well aware of the changing of seasons. One gives way to the next. The author of Ecclesiastes compared hard and good times to changing of seasons. There is a time for both. Part of our responsibilities as God's followers is to trust his timing, allow the seasons to change and to prepare for the changing seasons so that we are not surprised, but prepared.

Sermon Questions:

1. Describe the season of life you are in.
2. How can trusting God's timing bring peace in uncertainty?
3. What does it mean for something to be "beautiful in its time"?

In setting our priorities, shouldn't doing precede having? Unfortunately, the quest for more can quickly overtake our priorities. Society equates success with money and possessions. Now don't misunderstand, there is absolutely nothing wrong with having money and possessions. The question is how are we using these blessings to glorify the Creator (God)? Don't be like the rich young ruler who wanted the approval of Jesus on how good he was at keeping the law but was so tight fisted he was not able to share with others what God had blessed him with. He forgot that the Creator (God) has always owned and will always own what he created. God allows each of us to be managers of what is his for the short time we are here on this place called earth. When death comes, you and I will leave just as much as King Solomon, King David, the rich young ruler, Bill Gates, and everyone else, we are going to leave it all. We will be held accountable how we managed what God had blessed us with to manage.

Life is short. The time spent earning a living is effectively trading time (life) for cash. We all have an overhead (shelter, food, utilities, transportation, etc.). What else are you trading your time (life) for? Rarely, does the desire to have, acquire, and possess generate the fulfillment we imagine. What does tend to generate our sense of satisfaction is giving, contributing, doing, and creating in the lives of others. So check your priorities. Make sure your actions are in sync, in setting your priorities make sure that doing precedes having. "HOW CAN WE DO WHAT WE REALLY WANT IF WE ARE TOO BUSY WORKING FOR WHAT WE ALREADY HAVE."

THAT'S SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT!

Roger Owen
